To whom it may concern:

The NIH's proposal to lift its moratorium on funding research that involves injecting human embryonic stem cells into animal embryos is outside the bounds of natural law. It is also unethical. Doing so diminishes the value of human life. We believe the NIH's intent in this regard is abhorrent.

For the above reasons, we strongly disagree with the Federal government using any taxpayer dollars for research or to create beings such as human-animal chimeras.

Please re-think the NIH's plan to do such research.

Sincerely,

Donald Magee Monica Magee
