

As an elder at my church in Texas, I am appalled by the NIH suggestion of using human embryo cells in animals. The human body is sacred because we are made in the image of God. Stem cell research from one human to another has found no lasting application, yet it is funded far better than the new techniques of isolating and growing your own stem cells that have dozens of useful applications. Why waste more money, harm animals, and offend God and millions of Christians in order to make possible monsters. Mike W.
