Sir/Madame:

I strongly object to the NIH's proposal to rescind its moratorium on funding of research involving human-animal chimeras, and do not want my tax dollars used for such unethical research.

In 2015 ethical complications of such research were to be investigated. Has this been done? What was the outcome? There is no evidence shown that this has been fulfilled.

Frankly I am surprised that research like this would ever be taken seriously, as instead of steadily evolving, this would start de-evolving humans. This was the content of movies featuring "mad scientists" and evil minds. Please, please, let us not follow down that path. And I cannot believe that this kind of research is even seriously being considered.

Very truly yours,
Paula Lambrecht
