Dear NIH Scientists,

Please do not do research on human-animal chimeras. I did not even know or think this research was possible. I can not see any ethical reason to do this and many not to. Spend the money on other important research. Combining human and non human genes is going too far, much too far. Just because something is possible does not mean it should be done i.e. the experiments, horrible experiments, Nazi scientists did on prisoners during WWII.

Recently, a year and a half ago, I decided to stop eating meat and animal products (dairy) in respect for animal life. I am quite able to live on a plant based diet. The factory farms of pigs, chickens, turkeys, sheep are shameful, the forced impregnation of cows to continually produce milk is shameful. (See the videos Forks Over Knives and Earthlings.)

Once again please do not human-animal research. Let it go. There must be so many other projects at NIH that could use our tax dollars.

Thank you for all the good the NIH does!

Sincerely,
Mike Farrell
